WHERE WOMEN ARE PART OF THE CLUB

Duane Morris, LLP

CENTER CITY

Industry: Law

Local Employees: 557

Revenue: $336.5 million

The Philly legal world can feel a lot like an old boys' club, but Duane Morris is doing its best to smash the glass ceiling. "Traditionally, women don't have quite as many role models for how to develop business as men do," says partner Sharon Caffrey. The firm's Women's Initiative, led by Caffrey, offers networking and mentoring opportunities to female partners and associates, showing them how to be not just better lawyers, but better rainmakers—the people who bring in the dough that make the firm go.

That empowering attitude has paid off in attracting both female law-school grads and lateral hires from other firms: 45 percent of Duane Morris associates are women, as are nearly 20 percent of the firm's partners.
