The cannabis markets in the United States and Canada continue to provide exciting opportunities, especially on a cross-border level. While the U.S. still trails its northern neighbor with cannabis laws, there have been movements within the U.S. federal and state governments indicating that loosening regulations may facilitate opportunities for Canadian producers and other business entities looking to enter the burgeoning U.S. market. Duane Morris cannabis industry attorneys have extensive experience representing clients, based in both the U.S. and Canada, on a wide range of matters related to cross-border transactions.

2018 Farm Bill: Hemp Removed from Controlled Substances Act

The 2018 United States Farm Bill removed hemp from the Controlled Substances Act and contains other key updates, including providing a green light for banking, investing and insuring hemp-derived CBD products and barring the creation of laws prohibiting the interstate transportation of hemp or CBD derived from hemp. In addition to many states advancing cannabis laws, there are several federal bills gaining support from both parties that would significantly change the marijuana laws in the United States.
